In May of 1847, I procured an open cistern barometer, made by Mr. William H. Temple, of Boston, with a micrometer screw for the adjustment of the surface of the mercury in the cup to an ivory point. It was similar to others which he had constructed for the use of the coast survey. The Vernier is moved by rack-work, and reads to the one-hundredth of an inch. The interior diameter of the tube is very nearly three-tenths of an inch. In the reduction of the barometric observations, no account has been taken of capillarity.

The reductions to the temperature of 32° Fahr. and to the sea-level, with the exception of the last year, were made under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution, by Prof. J. H. Coffin, of Easton, Pa. The reduction to sea-level was based upon the result of direct experiment. The barometer, when standing at or near 30.00 inches, with steady weather, was several times transferred from College Hill to the water-level, and the mean result gave for the reduction +0.18 of an inch. This is the correction which has been employed.

Several different thermometers have been used, but always the most accurate which could be obtained in this country. For the three years (since April of 1857) I have used the thermometers made by Mr. James Green, of New York, and known as the Smithsonian thermometers.

The actual times of observation have sometimes differed a little from the hours indicated at the head of the columns, although as a general practice the observations have been made very nearly at the times specified. The direction and force of the winds, and the degree of cloudiness have been determined without the aid of special instruments. From the nature of the case these observations cannot lay claim to any minute accuracy; yet it was thought desirable, and not without its utility, to make a record of the facts as they would appear in the judgment of a practiced observer.

Besides the deductions which appear on the current pages of the work, an appendix has been added, containing elaborate summaries, which it is hoped will facilitate the researches of scientific meteorologists, and thus repay in some degree the labor which has been bestowed upon them.

I may state, in conclusion, that all due care has been bestowed upon the preparation of the manuscript, and upon the correction of the proof, as the sheets have passed through the press, with a view to prevent and exclude errors. But in so large a mass of figures it is hardly possible to secure entire accuracy; and I can only hope that any errors which may have escaped notice will not be such as to mislead the inquirer.

A. CASWELL.

TABLES OF SUMMARIES.

PAGE

I. Monthly and annual mean height of the barometer reduced to the sea level and to the temperature of 32° Fahr. 165

II. Monthly and annual mean height of the barometer for each of the three daily hours of observation, viz: S. R. or 6 A. M.; 1 or 2 P. M.; and 10 P. M. In this Table 29 inches must be added to make the full height 166

III. Monthly and annual mean temperatures 168

IV. Monthly and annual mean temperatures at three hours of daily observation, viz: S. R. or 6 A. M.; 1 or 2 P. M.; and 10 P. M. 169

V. Monthly and annual maximum and minimum temperatures and range 171

VI. The number of days in each month and year in which the prevailing winds came from each of the four quarters of the horizon. The figures 1, 2, 3, and 4 at the head of the monthly columns indicate the quarters as follows: 1, from some point between the N. and E.; 2, from some point between the E. and S.; 3, ditto S. and W.; 4, ditto W. and N. 173

VII. Monthly and annual force of the wind at each of the three daily hours of observation, the force of the wind being expressed in numbers from 1 to 6, the latter indicating a great storm or gale 175

VIII. Mean cloudiness for the three hours of observation, and for each month and year, the degree of cloudiness being expressed in numbers from 0 to 10; 0 indicates that the sky is clear, 10 that it is covered with clouds 176

IX. Monthly and annual number of days in which the sky was clear; variable or cloudy; and on which rain or snow fell 177

X. Monthly and annual quantity of rain and snow (reduced to water) in inches . . . 179

The following will present a view of the great diversity in thermometers, placed in different situations, when the weather, as in the present instance, is very cold and very still. Nearly all day of the 3d, all the 4th, and the earlier part of the 5th, there was uncommon stillness in the air —almost a dead calm.

5th. On the morning of the 5th, at or about sunrise, thermometers in this neighborhood varied from 5°.5 below zero to 26° below—the coldest stations all being in valleys, and the warmest on hills.

7th. At sunrise, thermometer 2° above zero. Plunged the bulb about 2 inches beneath the snow, and in about 15 minutes the mercury rose to 13°; plunged it 7 or 8 inches under, and in about 20 minutes the mercury rose to 25°.

19th. At 6½ P. M., observed an unusually bright meteor pass from the star Capella to a point a very little west of Aldebaran; the train of light long and brilliant, of a purplish hue.

29th. The aurora quite bright in the north for several hours in the evening.

31st. Frequent and vivid lightnings and rain before daylight—perhaps from 4 to 5 o clock.

February, 1835.

8	29.56	29.81	29.81	48	60	47	51.7	N'ly	N'ly	N. W'ly	Variable	Clear	Clear		8th. Pleasant during the day. At sunset, wind light S. W'ly. In evening, diffused light round the north; at about 9½ o'clock, beams of faint white light shot up from the east, or a little to the south of east, half way to the zenith. At 9¾ o'clock, a beautiful bow or belt of white light extended from said point in the east, across the heavens, south of the zenith, and terminated a little to the north of west. It descended on each side to within 6° or 8° of the horizon, and terminated conically. The belt was broadest in the central portions; it moved slowly to the south. At 10 o'clock, the middle of it passed through the northern part of the Sickle, the Dolphin, Arcturus, &c. At 10¼ o'clock, it had entirely disappeared. It very much resembled the bow seen in August, 1827.

REMARKS.

8th. Foggy in the morning; wind N. E'ly very light. Nearly calm during the day. Towards night, the wind, after being N. E. with small and very transient deviations for 18 days, came round to S. W. Clear in the evening.

9th. Wind light S'ly, W'ly, and N. W'ly; very warm.

11th. Wind S. W.; cloudy. Sprinkling at intervals in afternoon. Wind very fresh in the evenings.

12th. Beautiful day. Wind light at N. W.

13th. Wind N. W'ly in morning. At 20 minutes before 12, a very well defined halo was observed around the sun, with a radius of little more than 22°. The inner edge of the halo was dilute red; the middle and exterior white. Breadth more than a degree. This continued for about two hours, being occasionally obscured by light fleecy clouds from the west. The arc of a second halo, at the distance of about 46°, was occasionally visible in the south, which was fainter and less perfectly defined than the first.

17th. Thundershower from N. W. in afternoon. Rain began to fall at about 20 minutes before 5, and continued with great violence for 15 minutes. Showery in the evening.

18th. Wind S. W'ly; cloudy.

19th. Wind W'ly; variable. Sun out at intervals; very hot. Rain at night.

20th. Wind N. E. Rain in the morning; cool. Cloudy in afternoon.

21st. Wind N. E., brisk all day. Rain in the morning. Misty, with occasional light showers or sprinkling during the day.

22d. Wind N. E. Cloudy for the most part. Quite cool.

23d. Wind N. E. Cloudy and misty. Continues cool. For the last three days, fire has been comfortable.

24th. Wind light N. E. Misty all day.

25th. Wind light N. E'ly. Misty in the morning. Rain in the afternoon and evening.

26th. Wind light N. E. Misty during the day. Rain in the evening.

30th. Wind S. E'ly; warm. Sun smoke red towards evening.

1st Wind very light W'ly. Atmosphere filled with smoky exhalations, and the sun of a deep smoke red. During a part of the day, while the wind at the surface was W'ly, an upper current came from the N. E., as was evident by light clouds crossing the sun's disk.

2d. Warm and sultry. Sun continues red. Air smoky.

3d. Weather warm. Wind light S. E'ly in the afternoon. Corruscations of the aurora borealis appeared shooting nearly up to the zenith a little before 10 P. M.

4th and 5th. Weather warm. Wind light S. W'ly and W'ly.

6th. Very warm. Fine breeze from W'ly in the afternoon.

7th. Very hot. Fine breeze from W'ly in the afternoon and evening.

10th. Wind S. W'ly in the morning. Began to rain gently about noon. In the afternoon, wind hauled more to W'ly. From 5 to 6 P. M., wind came round to N. E., with fine rain and mist.

16th. Wind N. E. Cloudy morning; broke away from 11 to 12 A. M. Wind high and blustering in the afternoon. Cold for the season.

18th. Wind light N. E'ly and N'ly, in the morning; S. E'ly towards night at the surface of the earth, while an upper current carried the clouds from the N. W.

21st. Began to rain gently about 10 P. M., and continued during the night

24th. Began to rain very moderately at 6 P. M., and continued through the night.

30th. Rain in the morning; wind light S. W. Cleared about noon. From 6 to 7 P. M., wind came round to N. W. Aurora borealis in the evening—not very bright.

1	29.56	29.52	29.52	75	88	77	80.0	W'ly	S. W.	S. W.	Clear	Clear	Clear		1st. Aurora in the evening; was seen first from 8 to 9 o'clock; the northern portion of the heavens was pretty strongly illuminated. At 10½ P. M., the light extended nearly round to the S., and began to shoot up toward the zenith from all quarters. The coruscations were not in the form of slender needles, as they most frequently are, but broad sheets or waves, which followed each other with great rapidity from 30° or 40° altitude up to the zenith; or, more exactly, to a point S. E. of the zenith, or very nearly in the magnetic pole. The light began to assume at times a reddish hue, which grew more and more intense, sometimes, for two or three minutes, presenting a pretty deep red, which seems chiefly spread over a broad belt spanning the heavens from N. W. to S. E. It continued till 11½ P. M., when it was much faded. Was not further observed.

REMARKS.

1st. The aurora considerably bright during the evening; for a short time, brilliant corruscations of red light.

5th. Very clear at sunrise. Soon after dark, the moon appeared with a halo around it, distant about 22½°. The air soon began to be perceptibly hazy. The disk of the moon was dimmed, and the stars disappeared one after another, till, at 10 o'clock, the moon was much obscured by increasing vapor, and the bow became extinct.

On the following morning, the weather was mild and beautiful.

8th. Cloudy and blustering in the afternoon with wind W'ly. Came to N. W., and cleared in the evening; much cooler.

9th. Wind came to N. E., from 1 to 2 P. M., very light. Clouded up towards night. Flurry of snow in the night.

10th. Began to snow from 7 to 8 P. M.; wind very light N. E.; snow damp. Continued to snow till from 10 to 12 P. M. Snow from six to seven inches, equal to 0.75 of an inch of water.

17th. Began snowing from 1 to 2 P. M.; wind light at N. E.

18th. At 5 A. M., raining moderately; wind light at S. E. At sunrise, rain increasing; wind as before; barometer 29.48. At 10 A. M., wind hauling to S. with increased force, and heavy rain. At 12 M., wind S'ly, pretty strong, and rain still heavy. At from 12 M. to 1 P. M., rain abating, clouds broken, and the sun out for a few minutes. At 1 P. M., wind S. W., moderate; rain nearly over; barometer 28.74. At 2 P. M., wind light S.W.; clouds broken; barometer 28.60. At 3 P. M., wind S. W.; raining moderately; barometer 28.60. At 3½ P. M., wind W'ly; barometer beginning to rise. At 4 P. M., barometer 28.67, rising fast; wind hauling round to N. W.

REMARKS.

5th. Wind brisk from S. W. in afternoon. From 6 to 8 P. M., very blustering, with heavy clouds from S. W. and sprinkling of rain. At 10 P. M., moon out; wind more moderate

8th. Very mild in the morning; wind S. W. From 11 A. M. to 12 M., wind came round to W., and thence, in an hour or so, to N. W., with dashes of rain, heavy clouds, and blusterings. In the evening, partially clear; wind at the surface light from N. W., while the clouds come from S. W.

9th. Wind came to N. E. early in the morning. A little snow and mist at intervals during the day; wind light.

15th. At sunrise, wind S. W.; warm; raining moderately. From 9 to 10 A. M., wind came to about W. N. W., and continued blustering through the day.

17th. Wind S. W., very fresh; came round to W'ly in afternoon, and subsided; partially clear. Two or three very light showers during the day—just enough to wet the ground.

18th. At sunrise, very thick fog; wind light S. W'ly. At 1 P. M., wind light N. E.; fog thick. Misty in the evening. Considerable rain during the night. Frost entirely out of the ground in many places.

19th. At sunrise, raining moderately; wind N. E. From 11 to 12 A. M., wind hauled N'ly, and continued to swing till 2 P. M., when it reached the S. W., much increased in strength, with heavy dashes of rain. At 4 P. M., the clouds became broken; wind hauled to W'ly, and soon to N. W., very high and gusty. At sunset, there were two strata of clouds, which seemed to be very close together, both low and heavy, though broken, and both in pretty rapid motion—the lower from N. W., the upper from S. W. Clear at 6 P. M.; barometer rising rapidly. Wind high and very blustering during the night. Rain 1.00 inch.

27th. Wind light N. E. in morning; cloudy. Began to hail gently from 3 to 4 P. M.; wind still light. Hail soon turned to rain, and wind began to freshen. Rain and wind heavy during the evening. Rain ceased, and wind came to W'ly, before morning.

28th. At sunrise, weather mild and pleasant. Frost out of the ground in most places.

16th. Very pleasant.
17th. Cloudy in the afternoon and evening, with appearances of rain.
18th. Rain at intervals through the day. Very high wind and stormy during the night.
19th. Storm in the morning. Barometer began to rise at 8 A. M. Clear in the evening.
20th. A splendid day, without a cloud. Very brilliant aurora, continuing from 9 P. M. through the night. A luminous bow, of a few degrees in height, spanned 60° or 70° of the horizon, from which brilliant corruscations shot up towards the zenith to the height of 60° or 70°. What was unusual and very striking, was the rapid horizontal movement of what seemed to be dense masses of light. The bow seemed to heave and swell like the ocean, and thick masses of light beneath the bows moved rapidly backwards and forwards in a horizontal direction. The whole scene underwent unusually rapid and brilliant transformations.
21st. Cloudy, with appearances of rain.
22d to 25th. Pleasant.
28th. Rain during the night.
29th. Rain in the morning, pretty heavy.

November, 1844.

Note.—On the 1st of May, I commenced observations with a standard cistern barometer (with an ivory point and adjusting screw), made by J. H. Temple, Boston. The Vernier reads to the 1-100 of an inch, and the readings have been uniformly taken at the lowest ring of the meniscus formed at the top of the tube. The thickness of the meniscus is very nearly 3-100 of an inch; hence, all the readings of this month must be increased by that amount. The means and the reductions to sea level are corrected. The readings will hereafter be to the top of the meniscus.

1st. Pleasant.
2d. Very fine. Comet visible in the telescope, in presence of the moon ten days' old; its motion very rapid.
3d. Pleasant. Appearances of rain in evening.
4th. Sprinkling of rain from 8 to 9 A. M., and from 5 to 6 P. M.
5th. Very moderate. Rain during most of day.
6th. Sprinkling of rain at intervals through day.
7th. Cool morning.
8th. Raw and cold for the season.
9th. Mist and drizzle most of the day. Partly clear at 10 P. M.
10th Pleasant.
11th. Variable day. Very clear evening.
12th. Ther. fell to 38° last night. Pleasant day. Aurora from 10 to 11 P. M., low and quite bright, without coruscations.
13th. Began to rain moderately about 11 A. M.; continued through P. M —sometimes briskly.
14th. At 3 P. M., there was a shower of hail, which continued not more than 4 or 5 minutes, but in that time the quantity which fell was very extraordinary. In the space of one minute from the commencement, the ground was white with it, and at the end of the shower it might be scraped up anywhere in the garden by the handful. The hailstones were not ice, but compact balls of snow, flattened on one, two, or three, and sometimes four, sides, so as to present a somewhat angular appearance. Very many of the balls were ¾ of an inch, while some were very nearly ½ inch, in diameter. All that I particularly examined, which was a large number, were so soft as to be crushed between the fingers, or have their form changed. In the largest-sized balls, I observed that they were softer in the centre than at the surface. These large balls were intermixed with many smaller ones of different structure, and evidently formed under different circumstances, many of them being light, soft balls of snow. When wet by the rain which followed, they were all readily formed into massive snow-balls. The hail was very restricted in its extent in one direction—that is, from north to south. In the southerly part of the city, there was none at all. In Charlesfield Street, less than a quarter of a mile south of this spot, none was observed. It extended in a northerly direction about two miles, and easterly, so far as I can learn, about seven miles. It came from a distance at the west. It has been reported from New Haven.

REMARKS.

1st. Pleasant.
2d. Air raw at night.
3d. Foggy. Light shower from noon to 1 P. M.
4th. Copious thundershower from 6½ to 8 P. M.
5th, 6th, and 7th. Very fine.
8th. Light rain, with mist, from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.
9th. Pleasant.
10th. Sun out occasionally in the afternoon.
11th. Pleasant, but cool.
12th. Fine.
13th. Pleasant.
14th. Pleasant. Evening clear and very mild.
15th. Appearances of rain. Light mist at 3 P. M.
16th. Morning very sultry. Heavy thundershower in the afternoon.
17th. Very fine.
18th. Very hot sun.
19th. Intensely hot.
20th. Intensely hot. Air fresh in the evening from S'ly.
21st. Heat extreme.
22d. Heat unabated.
23d. Very warm, but a good air. Dashes of rain, with thunder, at 9 A. M.
24th. Rather cooler. Showery in the evening so as to lay the dust.
25th. Fine.
26th. A beautiful meteor was seen at 15 to 20 minutes past 8 P. M., passing the meridian plane 10° or 12° below Polaris, making with it a small angle, the meteor passing from the east to the west side. The light was very brilliant, being white tinged with blue. When it burst, it separated into several reddish fragments. Its course was seen through about 10° of the great circle. It was seen by several persons. The daylight was still strong. It very much resembled a brilliant rocket.
27th. Pleasant.
28th. Sprinkling of rain; little more than enough to lay the dust.
29th. Rain and damp. Kindled a fire to make the house comfortable.

Rain or snow fell on 13

1st. Very fine.
2d. Began to sprinkle at 1 P. M. Light rain in the evening.
3d. Light rain at 6 A. M. Nearly clear at 10 A. M. Fine afternoon and evening.
4th. Very fine.
5th. Pleasant.
6th. Heavy showers during the day; thunder occasionally from 4 to 5 P. M. Evening cloudy, but no rain.
7th. Very light haze in evening. Bow around the moon.
8th. Began to rain about 6 P. M. Heavy showers in the evening.
9th and 10th. Very fine.
11th. Rather chilly.
12th. Cold and raw. Snow-flakes occasionally fell.
13th. Ground hardly frozen this morning.
14th. Ground again frozen. At 4 P. M., wind fresh S. E'ly; in the evening, N. E., and began to rain very moderately between 9 and 10 P. M.
15th. Mist and light rain through the day. In the evening, wind heavy.
16th. Wind and storm very heavy during the day. The barometer began to rise at 3 P. M., and, rising one-tenth of an inch, it became stationary at about 5½ P. M., standing at 29.36 for six or eight hours. Flakes of snow, mingled with rain, fell from 10 to 11 A. M.
17th. Storm somewhat abated, but still heavy. The amount of rain on the 16th and 17th somewhat uncertain, in consequence of one rain-gauge being blown from its place and the other leaking. It was not less than two inches, probably more.
18th. Occasional mist during the day.
19th. In the afternoon, wind high S. E'ly and very raw. Sprinkling of rain at 10 P. M.
20th. Rain, and snow in large heavy flakes which sometimes quite covered the ground.
21st. Moderate rain in afternoon and evening.
22d. Fine. Evening very clear.
23d to 26th. Very fine.
27th. Overcast, but clouds thin.
28th. Light sprinkling of rain.
29th. Pleasant.
30th. Began to rain very moderately at 4 P. M., increasing in the evening.

Note.—The column headed "Relative Humidity" is now for the first time introduced into this Record. The number 100 represents the atmosphere saturated with vapor, so that, with the least reduction of temperature, the vapor would be condensed into fog or mist. The results have been deduced from three daily observations with the standard dry and wet-bulb thermometers of the Smithsonian Institution.

Note.—The comet (Donati's, or the fifth comet of 1858) became distinctly visible to the naked eye early in the month, and before its close attained a brilliancy surpassing that of any comet for many years, with the exception of the great comet of 1843 for the single day of its passing its perihelion. We have no recollection of so brilliant a comet as that which now lights up the northwestern sky, immediately after the sunlight has disappeared.

The quantity during the day was about four inches, which is more than has fallen in any single day since July 13, 1834. On the night of that day, occurred the most extraordinary rain of which I have any record. It was believed at the time that the quantity was from seven to eight inches. A gauge holding six inches was filled to overflowing.
