WHERE ARE THEY?

Mackerel Fleet Have Not Seen Many Fish Lately.

Large Number of Arrivals To-day with Small Fares.

Nineteen sail of the seining fleet, most of them from the Maine coast, are at this port this morning with less than 2000 barrels of salt mackerel. Sch. Jennie B. Hodgdon has 300 barrels and schs. Norumbega and Puritan 200 barrels each. The others have from 30 to 150 barrels, so it is easy to see that the vessels have not done much the past two weeks. The skippers report that the fish have not shown lately and seemingly have gone down or struck off shore. All are now waiting for the next dark of the moon, which comes in about a week, when it is hoped that the fish can be again located
