SWAMPED THEIR BOAT.

And Also Had To Cut Their Seine Away in Rough Sea.

But Sch. Alert's Crew Saved Part of Very Large School.

A special to the Times from Fulton Market tells the story of sch. Alert, there today, with a fine trip of mediums. Had he got all that was coming to him, Capt. Malloch would have given Fulton dock the surprise of its life, for he had the greatest kind of a school and then got beat out of the best part of it. It was mighty rough, when he set Saturday night, only 10 miles off from Cape Henry, the cape bearing west, and there did not seem to be much chance of doing any thing.

But fish were showing and all hands were eager, so when a good bunch showed, the watch aloft gave the word to drop off and they were after them quick. They dropped the end, went along and turned her in and came together all right, and after pursing and drying in a bit, realized that they had a big haul. But it was too much for boat or men. The seas came fierce, soon the boat was nearly swamped. They hung to her and finally saw that the only thing to do was to cut in self-preservation. This they did, but they succeeded in saving 12,000 fish. What they would have had were the weather fine would have filled the craft.

Capt. Malloch reports that it was a regular gale at the time and that when they cut the fish went out by thousands. It was heart breaking, but they could not help it, and were lucky to save what they did.

Capt. Malloch reports that they had seen plenty of fish, but that they were very wild and almost impossible to stop a school. The fare counted out 11,049 mediums and 667 large fish.

RELEASED FROM JAIL.

Fines of Capts. Rudolph and Spinney Were Paid.

CUTTER FIONA IS IN CHASE.

With Orders To Arrest Capt. Morrissey of Sch. Arethusa.

Referring to the recent difficulties of three American salt bankers at Port au Basques, N. F., a despatch from St. John's, N. F., says that at the request of the magistrate at Channel, the colonial government has ordered the cruiser Fiona to apprehend the Gloucester, Mass., schooner Arethusa and place Captain Morrissey under arrest on a charge of violating the Newfoundland laws, which prohibit the use of bull polls (trawls) within three miles of the shore.

Capt. Spinney of sch. Athlete and Capt. Rudolph of sch. Harry W. Nickerson, both of Gloucester, were convicted of the same offense and fined $100 each, which they paid under protest. The dispute has been referred to the authorities at Washington by Congressman Gardner of the Gloucester district and will probably be carried to London.

Last Saturday morning Captains Spinney, Rudolph and Morrisey were summoned by legal process to appear before the magistrate at Channel on Monday on charges of violating the colonial laws. A writ was served on each captain, but all three ignored the document and, setting sail, proceeded to sea Monday forenoon in defiance of the court's order.

During the afternoon the Harry A. Nickerson and Athlete encountered a heavy ice field which extended for miles. The ice was driven in along the coast before a high wind and endangered the two vessels, which were forced to return to port. The Arethusa, which got away first, was able to get clear of the ice pack and escape.

When the Nickerson and Athlete dropped anchor in the harbor the magistrate issued warrants for the arrest of Captains Spinney and Rudolph. Both commanders submitted to arrest and were placed on trial. They were convicted of a breach of the fishery regulations and ordered to pay a fine of $100 each or spend two months in jail. The fines were paid under protest.

The magistrate issued a warrant for the arrest of the captain of the Arethusa and communicated with the colonial authorities, who ordered the cruiser Fiona to search for the defaulting vessel.

The Americans claim the right to fish with trawls on the southwestern coast under the treaty of 1818, which allows them to fish upon equal terms with Newfoundland fishermen. They also claim that they are protected by the temporary agreement known as the modus vivendi until all the matters in dispute are adjudicated by The Hague tribunal, to which the fisheries question will shortly be submitted.

The colonial laws forbid the use of the trawl even by Newfoundland fishermen, and the government holds that Americans are bound by these regulations, which, it says, do not conflict with the treaty of 1818.

Unless some understanding is reached within a short time the Newfoundland fishing season will be a poor one for them, the American captains claim, as they are equipped for trawl fishing only, and the fleet is awaiting the outcome of the representations made at Washington.

This is the St. John's interpretation of the affair, and therefore is interesting.

It is known here, however, that Capts. Rudolph and Spinney were committed to jail, of which the above despatch does not speak. The fines of $100 each and costs were paid yesterday by draft, and the captains were released and are now on board their vessels and ready to continue fishing operations.

It does not look very much as though Capt. Morrissey was trying to run away, as his craft was at Rose Blanche, N. F., yesterday, the distance from there to Channel being only a few miles, so the Fiona will have little trouble in finding him if she has actually started after him.

DID NOT GO FAR.

Capt. Morrissey Evidently Not Evading the Cutter.

Will Probably Go to Port au Basque and Pay Fine.

From recent advices it seems that sch. Arethusa, Capt. Clayton Morrissey, is making no attempt to run away from the Newfoundland cutter Fiona, which is credited with being on the search for her. As was stated in yesterday's Times, the Arethusa put in at Rose Blanche, which is not more than 10 or 15 miles to the westward of Port au Basques, which shows very plainly that Capt. Morrissey was not trying very hard to get away from the cutter, if she was after him.

From news received here, it is understood that the Arethusa will return immediately to Port au Basques and that Capt. Morrissey will pay the fine of $100 and costs, under protest, as did Capts. Rudolph and Spinney of schs. Harry A. Nickerson and Athlete. It is probable that sch. Arethusa is at Port au Basques today.

April 9.

HAS SECOND TRIP.

Sch. Clintonia at New York with 8000 Mackerel.

Schs. Esperanto and Hattie M. Graham Also There with Trips.

A special to the Times this morning from New York announces the arrival at Fulton Market of sch. Clintonia, Capt. Ralph Webber, with 8000 fresh medium mackerel.

This is the second trip for Capt. Webber this season, he having landed one last week at Fortress Monroe, and is the second one to make two trips thus far this season, Capt. Solomon Jacobs of sch. A. M. Nicholson being the other.

Fresh medium mackerel brought 20 cents each, from the vessel, at Fulton market yesterday.

In the fare of sch. Alert, landed at New York on Tuesday were quite a number of tinker mackerel.

A special to the Times this forenoon announces the arrival at that port of two more mackerel fares, sch. Esperanto, Capt. Charles Maguire, with 135 barrels of mediums and bloaters, and sch. Hattie M. Graham, Capt. Roy Kimball, with 80 barrels of he same kind of fish.

A special to the Times states that the fares of schs. Esperanto and Hattie M. Graham, were taken off Cape Henry, in about the same spot as the other fares recently landed. Capt. Charles Maguire of the Esperanto reports seeing but few schools. He took his fare Tuesday night.

Sch. Hattie M. Graham had 1000 large mackerel in her fare, which brought 30 cents each.

The fare of sch. Esperanto included 9750 medium mackerel and 400 bloaters.

Sailed Dory Handlining.

Sch. Elector, Capt. Daniel Rider, sailed on a salt bank dory handlining codfishing trip yesterday, being the third of the dory handliners to get away.

April 9.

FOULED ATLANTIC CABLE.

Sch. Hattie M. Graham Had To Slip Her Whole Chain.

To Prevent Dragging or Parting the Atlantic Wire.

A special to the Times from New York states that owing to the heavy wind last night, sch. Hattie M. Graham did not go up New York harbor to Fulton dock, but anchored south of Governor's island, and in dragging her anchor, picked up the Western Union Atlantic cable and was forced to slip her own cable to avoid breaking or damaging it.

It is supposed that the Graham had a chain anchor out, instead of a cable anchor, as about all the southern mackerel fleet carry chain instead of manila rope cable.

VERY GRATIFYING.

Spring Mackerel C[illegible] e Largest fo[illegible]

Light Nights and Blowy Weather Now Bothering Fleet.

There were no mackerel arrivals at New York or Fortress Monroe up to 9 o'clock this morning. The light nights are now on, so the seiners have little or no "darks" to work on. Some of the skippers think however that if there is any body to the schools of medium fish that they will show in the daytime. If they do, some good catches will result. The fleet, since it went out south, has been hampered by very blowy weather.

Imports of salt mackerel at Boston to date, of the catch of 1907 are 24,451 barrels against 41,522 barrels of the catch of 1906.

The following table shows the southern catch of fresh mackerel, up to this morning, for the past eight 1901—Nine ar[illegible] barrels.

1902—Sixteen arriv[illegible] 551 barrels.
1903—Eight arrivals, 296 barrels.
1904—Eight arrivals, 855 brarels.
1905—One arrival, 30 barrels.
1906—Two arrivals, 40 barrels.
1907—Two arrivals, 70 barrels.
1908—Seventeen arrivals, 1906 barrels.

Thus it is seen that the present season south has, to date, been the best for quite a number of years.

LOST ALL HER TRAWLS.

Sch. Muriel M. Young Had Hard Weather on the Banks.

Sch. Muriel M. Young of Louisburg, N. S., Capt. Himmelman, arrived home Tuesday morning from the fishing grounds with the loss of her anchor and trawls. Only one set had been made by Capt. Himmelman, taking about 25 quintals of cod. The mishap to the craft was caused by the fishermen now on the banks. The fleet has been away over two weeks, but very little fishing has been done. The loss to the owners of the Muriel is over $300. She will refit and leave at once for the balance of the season.

SEALING STEAMER SUNK.

St. Johns, April 13.—Bringing tidings of the sinking of the steamer Grand Lake of the sealing fleet, sealer Newfoundland limped into port, leaking badly. The Newfoundland's bows and stern were crushed by ice, and her crew of 200 men were forced to stand by for thirty hours pumping and bailing to keep the vessel afloat. The Grand Lake was shut up in the jaws of the two great ice floes, until her sides gave way, and even her engines were crushed. Her crew of 214 men escaped to the steamer Vanguard, which was close by. A catch of 20,000 seals went down with the Grand Lake.
