The district averages given in the Rainfall Tables prior to the year 1928 are not comparable with the district normals owing to a dividing the total rainfall of the district by the total number of stations in the district. But as there are always some stations for which ing the sum of the available normals, by the number of stations for which normal exist.

To make the two comparable, after the year 1927, the district averages also have been calculated by dividing the sum of
