BIG SEASON'S WORK.

Sch. Maggie and May and Valkyria Make Grand Stocks.

Crews of Fortunate Craft Share Remarkably Well.

Sch. Maggie and May, Capt. Alex. McEachern, stocked $7909.06 on her recent salt bank trip, the crew sharing $274.94. For his two trips this year Capt. McEachern has rolled the magnificent stock of $17,214.04, which is exceeded probably by only one vessel of the salt bank fleet this season. Capt. McEachern started late, but as usual, the end of the season finds him close to the head of the column. His crew are happy over their season's share of $590.32.

Sch. Valkyrie, Capt. Angus Hines, is another one of the top notches of the salt bank fleet this year and no one is surprised to see this well known steady going skipper in his accustomed place in the front rank.

On her last trip, the Valkyrie stocked $8103.93, the crew sharing $285.36, giving her a season's stock on two trips of $16,868.26 while the crew each shared $581.45.

NO CLAMS AT IPSWICH.

Clam-Diggers Are All Following Herring Fishing.

Clams are practically unobtainable in Ipswich, it being next to an impossibility to buy them. The explanation is simple. The clammers just now are finding it too profitable herring catching to divert their time and energy from the working of this gold mine to the drudgery of clam digging.

The clam diggers are all following the herring fishery, either bringing their trips here or disposing of them to the Gloucester vessels lying in Ipswich river waiting for cargoes.
