Cape Cod Dorymen Doing Well.

The high price of salted cod in the present market has started a rush for the cod fishing grounds by the dory fishermen of Cape Cod. Large catches are reported to be the rule, after short trips, and if the present favorable conditions of the market holds, the men expect to be richly recompensed for their work.

SOME DOING WELL.Late Report from Seining Fleet Off North Sydney.*Weather Is Now Very Rough with Frequent Snowstorms.

A letter to the Times from its Port Mulgrave, N. S., correspondent reports the following seiners at North Sydney, C. B., on that date, with fares of mackerel, as follows:

Sch. Diana, Capt. James McLean, 150 barrels salt mackerel; sch. Victor, Capt. John W. McFarland, 90 barrels; sch. Parthia, Capt. Anson Leaman, 80 barrels; sch. Madonna, Capt. Douglass, McLean, 50 barrels.

This report shows that some of the vessels have evidently made hauls after coming onto the fishing ground off North Sydney from North Bay. Our correspondent says that the weather is very rough, with snow storms.

MEN WANTED TO SHIPAt North Sydney To Engage in Herring Fishery.

A North Sydney despatch of Monday says: The gasoline schooner Veda M. McKown came here from Gloucester and would have shipped fifteen men, who were willing to go aboard, but as no power craft can ship men in Nova Scotia for such a purpose, the skipper got orders to proceed to Bay of Islands and take chances of getting men there. There are other Gloucester craft here on a similar mission, but owing to some misunderstanding left port for the grounds.

"The British warship Brilliant, which is now undergoing some repairs on account of breaking hawsers while towing on vessel that were ashore on the south coast, will proceed to the fishing grounds, where the commander will act as arbitrator on any differences that may arise in connection with the modus vivendi."

Parker of this port had gone ashore at Wood Island and asked that assistance be sent at once.

INCLUDES THE MAGDALENSHague Tribunal Will Consider This with Fisheries Case.*Important Lights Thrown on Sir Robert Bond's Attitude.

A press despatch from Ottawa says: "At a meeting of the cabinet on Wednesday it was formally decided that the fisheries case between Canada and the United States in respect to the Magdalen Islands would be submitted to The Hague Conference along with the Newfoundland case which involves similar interests. Canada will send a special commissioner to The Hague to present the Canadian case.

"A review of a recently published blue book of the British Colonial Office gives some very interesting side lights on the attitude of Premier Bond of Newfoundland, and the sentiments of the fishermen of the colony.

"A temporary arrangement was necessary, and in making it the British government naturally counted upon the cooperation of Sir Robert Bond, who was then in London. The first draft of a new modus vivendi provided for the renunciation by the United States of practically everything for which it was contending, and this country naturally and properly declined to accept that draft.

"Then the British government, which had anticipated such a result and had warned Sir Robert of it, asked the Newfoundland Prime Minister of his opinion as to the acceptability of a renewal of the former modus vivendi, and also which he deemed he more important to the colony, the prohibition of the use of purse seines or the prohibition of the employment of Newfoundlanders by Americans.

"To these inquiries Sir Robert and his colleagues made no reply. Instead, they assumed the position that no modus vivendi whatever was necessary, and added the suggestion that the British government should abrogate the treaty of 1818—a suggestion which, says Lord Elgin, 'it is difficult to believe can have been meant seriously,' and which the London Times describes as 'almost incredible folly.'

"Again, with noteworthy patience the British government requested the Newfoundland ministers to assist in drafting a satisfactory modus vivendi, but in vain. All it could get from Sir Robert Bond was a promise that if it would drop the modus vivendi plan the colonial government would permit Americans to purchase the fish from Newfoundlanders at $2 barrel—the price last year having been only $1.25. This, of course, would not do, and the British government had no alternative of a modus vivendi without colonial cooperation.

"The record is completed by adding what, of course, the blue book could not add, that Sir Robert Bond inveighed against this settlement as 'a disgrace to British diplomacy' and 'a shameful sacrifice of the interests of the people of the colony.' In view of all this the London Times does not appear to be unjust in declaring that the incidents recounted 'are not calculated to add to the reputation as a statesman of the prime minister of the colony.'

LOUISBURG LETTER.

Four Gloucester Bankers Had Monday Gale Very Severe.

Sch. Alice R. Lawson Had 18 Dories Swept from Deck.

Under date of Wednesday, our Louisburg, C. B., correspondent writes us as follows:

One of the severest storms for many years visited this coast Monday. In the morning the wind blew heavy from the southeast, accompanied with snow and rain. In the afternoon it suddenly veered to northeast and blew a perfect hurricane, accompanied by snow squalls.

On Wednesday afternoon four Gloucester vessels came in here and their captains reported having the gale very heavy. Sch. Maggie and May, Capt. Alex. McEachern, was about 40 miles from Scatteri. Capt. McEachern said it was quite moderate up to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the gale burst on them in all its fury. During the height of the storm, one of the crew named Boudrot was washed overboard and drowned.

Sch. Alice R. Lawson, Capt. Winslow, one of the Gloucester dory handling fleet, arrived Tuesday night. She had the gale very severe, being struck by a heavy sea which swept her deck and carried off 18 dories, none of which were recovered.

Sch. Arkona, Capt. Newman Wharton, also arrived Tuesday night. She had the gale off Scatteri and had her foresail badly torn. She is in to repair.

Sch. J. J. Flaherty, Capt. LeBlanc, is also there. She rode out the gale off Scatteri and came through it without damage.

The Provincetown sch. Gladstone arrived Wednesday from the fishing grounds. Her captain reports breaking adrift during the big gale and losing an anchor and the greater part of her cable.

FLEET IS GATHERING.

Big Herring Schools Reported Outside Bay of Islands.

Not Much Fishing Has Been Done As Yet.

At Bay of Islands, up to last Wednesday, were 19 American and 14 Canadian vessels. The late arrivals of the former comprise schs. Georgie Campbell, Maxine Elliott, Oregon, Annie M. Parker, Orinoco, Lucinda I. Lowell, Dora A. Lawson, Lottie G. Merchant, Veda M. McKown, Esperanto, Smuggler, and Clintonia, and the late Canadian arrivals comprise schs. Juniata, Lottie, Earl V. S., Lila D. Young, Defender, Margaret E. Schwartz, Colonia, Mariner, Palatia, Ambition and Yukon.

The Bay of St. George sch. Unique is going to Bay of Islands for a load of herring.

The Newfoundland sch. B. G. Anderson is loading herring and codfish for Halifax, at Bay of St. George.

The British warship Brilliant, Capt. Anstruther, has arrived at Bay of Islands for the season.

Sch. Bohemia is reported to have secured 750,000 pounds of codfish at Bonne Bay.

The Western Star says: "Not very much has been done in this fishery so far, as there is only a small quantity of gear set. It generally happens that herring strike in before fishermen are ready, and such is the case this year. Herring have been all over the bay the past fortnight; and outside the headlands such schools of them were never seen before. Nets set in Humber Arm and around Woods island have done moderately well, getting from one to six barrels a day. Now we learn of similar fares being taken in the upper part of Middle Arm. It is thought that after the storm of the past few days, the fish outside the bay will work into the upper reaches. A great many men have come here from all parts of the country and with the present price ruling they will likely make good wages this fall."

Four of the American fishing "admirals" here are provided with gasoline boats, which are of great benefit to them. The best of the number is the one in charge of Capt. Cameron. She is fitted with a 17 horse-power engine, and can make about 10 knots. Western Star.
