GILL NETTERS BIG SHIPMENT

Sent 300 Boxes Fresh Fish to Boston Today by Early Steamer.

The only receipts of fresh fish here yesterday were those landed by the gill netters, which shipped some 300 boxes by this morning's early boat for T wharf market this morning.

Most of the crafts were out yesterday and several good lifts were made. Most of the boats are fishing from the Ridges to the lightship where pollock have been plenty for several weeks and the fishermen have been reaping a harvest.

With the fresh fish famine at Boston this week, the gill netters have practically supplied the market yesterday afternoon's shipments being over 300 boxes or approximately 150,000 pounds.

The only other arrival since yesterday is sch. Fannie A. Smith from Newfoundland and with a full cargo of salt and pickled herring.

HEARING ON THE FISH SCHEDULE

None Asked for Yet But Probably Will be in Due Time.

While the matter of tariff revision is the foremost matter of national importance under consideration at the present time, it is a noticeable feature that no provision has yet been made for a hearing on the fish schedule.

Just what is uppermost in the minds of the tariff revisionists on this subject, has not yet come to light and naturally there is considerable wonderment as to just what will be done.

As far as can be learned no move has been made by any of the local concerns looking forward to a hearing. There is still plenty of time to take action, however, and there is doubt but when the proper time arrives, the fish people will be heard from, should the occasion demand.

Fishing Fleet Movements.

Schs. Eglantine, Thomas S. Gorton and Evelyn M. Thompson arrived at Liverpool Thursday last and cleared.
Sch. Gladys and Nellie put into Halifax Thursday last for shelter and repairs.

Provincetown Fishing Notes.

Word has been received that whaling brig Viola which sailed the first of October for a whaling voyage, had lost two boats on her passage out to the islands, the boats having been taken from the davits in a storm encountered on the way across the Atlantic.

The Fish Week at T Wharf.

Fresh fish receipts at T wharf, Boston, last week, totalled $81,900 pounds from 57 arrivals against 1,940,900 pounds from 113 arrivals for the same week of 1911.

ANOTHER SALT HERRING FARE.

Sch. Gov. Russell Had Long Hard Passage From Bonne Bay

Sch. Gov. Russell arrived home yesterday from a Newfoundland salt herring trip, being the only off shore arrival in port since Saturday.

The Russell was 14 days from Bonne Bay and like the Fannie A. Smith met with heavy gales and head winds all the way home. The craft never made a stop, however, reaching port safely yesterday. She brings 1332 barrels of salt herring and 176 barrels of pickled herring for the Gorton-Pew Fisheries company.

Most of the gill netters were out Saturday and again yesterday, although the catch yesterday was not up to that of the preceding day. Pollock constituted the bulk of the shipments, although there was some cod which helped out nicely for this morning's market at Boston.

DROWNED AT PENSACOLA.

Word Received Here of the Death of Capt. John
S. Welsh.

A dispatch to the Times late Saturday evening from Pensacola, Florida, announces the death there by drowning of Capt. John S. Welch, formerly of this port.

No particulars were given, the dispatch merely stating, "Capt. John S. Welch is drowned. Will send particulars later." It was signed W. H. Nouss.

It is believed here that the unfortunate man to whom the telegram has reference, is Capt. John S. Welch, for years one of the best known fishermen sailing from this port.

A few years ago he went to Galveston, Texas, and engaged in the red snapper fishery and according to reports later went to Pensacola where he engaged in the same fishery. From reports received here he had made good as master in this line of fishery and had been among the leaders in the red snapper fleet.

OPEN WINTER AT NEWFOUNDLAND

Is Predicted by the Native
Fishermen on Treaty
Coast.

Late advices from Newfoundland states that herring are still running plentiful at Bonne Bay and several crafts are there loading.

The only frost of the season was on Tuesday and Friday of last week, but the weather set in wild again Saturday and an open winter is predicted by the fishermen and settlers along the shore.

Portland Fishing Notes.

Two fish fares were landed at Portland Friday by vessels of the local fleet, the schooners Edmund F. Black and Watauga coming in with 25,000 and 12,000 pounds respectively of mixed fish, quite a good proportion being cod and haddock, which have been in very scant supply of late. The two schooners have been fishing in Rockland Bay, and both skippers report the worst kind of weather, it having been so rough and most of the week they spent in that locality that only on a couple of days were they able to do much, the Black reporting the loss of 10 tubs of gear in one of the gales encountered. Both schooners sold their fares to good advantage, haddock selling at from five to seven cents.

Dec. 17.

The fish is provided with an automatic straining apparatus of the utmost fineness. The result is that as this fish breathes, the water through its gills it unconsciously sifts out its daily food. The wonder, then, is not how its teeming life gets its living, but how the astonishing multiplicity of marine life can possibly be kept under, even by the innumerable fish that throng the ocean. —Harper's Weekly.

Portland Fish Notes.

There is no relief in sight as far as the Portland fish market is concerned. Friday the prices were even higher than they were the day before, for the fishermen were being paid $7 a hundred weight for cod and haddock right through. On Thursday, the price was $7 for haddock, but only $6 for large cod. Only a very few pounds of fish were received during Friday and the big dealers on Commercial and Central wharves found the time hanging idly on their hands.

The situation is more serious now than it has been for some time. For 10 days the wind has continued to blow a gale outside and the fishermen have been unable to make a setting. Some of the vessels have gone to the eastward to fish and they may bring back fares. For real "live" fish, as the dealers call those newly caught, the price is the highest it has ever been and may go still higher unless there is a break in the bad weather.

Ashore and Floated.

The Boston fishing sch. Galatea, Capt. Russell, from Jeffries bank with 11,000 pounds of fish, ran aground in Boston harbor below Castle Island yesterday and was hard and fast for several hours. When the tide receded, she listed sharply to port, but righted on the incoming tide and was pulled off by a tug and proceeded to T wharf. She sustained no important damage.

FOOLISH-FACED FLOUNDERS. Sophisticated Sportsmen Describes This Variety of the Species.

Having about finished the quest of the foolish-faced flounder, which is at its high during the month of November, a sportsman with humor in his makeup condescends to tell some interesting things about the fish with the funny face.

He declares the waters hereabouts not polluted by sewerage and dyes, abound with the fish, which make good eating and produce much merriment when one looks them in the face.

He said: "The flounder's countenance is on the bias. His face looks as if it had been twisted part way round, bringing both of his eyes on the same side of his nose. There are right-handed and left-handed flounders, which peculiarity is determined by the placing of the eyes. Some have them on the right-hand side, and some have them on the left-hand side of their noses.

The right-handers are in the majority, for only about one in 500 are left-handed, foolish-faced flounders. He is a funny fish in other ways, for his fins are peculiar. His dorsal and pectoral fins are on his sides, and they extend nearly all the way round him. This makes him look like an elliptical buzz saw. The only fin on his back is the one that would have been on his left side, if he were not so badly twisted.

"His color makes him a joke, too, for he is brindle, like a Boston terrier pup, on his upper surface or top sides, and white on the under sides. If he swam upright like a sunfish he would be white going past you and brindle coming back, this funny fish.

"The fluke is one of this family of many species to which the flounder belongs; that is to say, the Winter flounder, as the species know in this vicinity is called. The fluke is what is known as the summer flounder and is different from our November friend of which I now speak.

"Our friend is not a very large fish, for he averages about a pound and a half. The largest of them do not weigh over 2½ pounds. A freak weighing four pounds sometimes is caught. The fluke will weigh 10 pounds and sometimes they weigh as much as 15 pounds.

"The winter flounder has a small mouth and no teeth and eats small crustaceans, shell fish and marsh worms. The fluke has a large mouth and needle-like teeth and hunts live

Capt. Cabral conveys the sch. William A. Morse to Mr. Story as a part of the deal which was consummated through the agency of Capt. William Foley.

The new craft has been named the Delphina Cabral.

Maine Fishermen Go West.

Some 15 or more hardy Maine fishermen went up on the steamer Bay State last night, says the Portland Argus of Saturday, having signed with the agent of the Booth Fisheries Co. of Chicago to engage in halibut fishing on the coast of Alaska. They will leave Boston by rail tomorrow for Seattle, the overland journey occupying about four days. The party was composed of men from the Maine fishing towns, all being well used to the business. It is possible a second party may follow them next week.

SCH. REGINA LOST ONE OF HER CREW

Capt. John Hickey of sch. Terra Nova which arrived at T wharf yesterday reported the loss of Thomas Comfort, one of the crew of sch. Regina, who was lost from his vessel down on the Cape Shore during a recent storm.

No details of the sad affair were given and will not be learned until the craft arrives at the market. Capt. Hickey spoke the Regina shortly after the sad affair.

INEXHAUSTIBLE FISHERIES.

Such the World's Herring Fishery is Said To Be.

The great curtain nets, as well as the seines, used by the fishermen who take the vast quantities of herring off the North Atlantic coast, must be constructed of the very stoutest materials or they would be (as they sometimes are) inevitably smashed by the dead weight of the catch.

If one need evidence of the immense number of these fish, he has but to stroll upon the beach of one of the coast counties of New Brunswick after a heavy gale in the spawning-time. Then the eggs of the herring fall through the water and attach themselves in sticky clusters to rocks and stones at the bottom. Each of these is about a quarter of an inch in size, protected by a sort of gelatinous shell. Sometimes they are thrown out by heavy gales and lie upon the shore, knee-deep. They are gathered up by farmers, who find them excellent manure.

Yet, despite the vast quantities of spawn thus destroyed by the gales, the shoals of herring are never, it is said, appreciably smaller. It has been calculated that one herring will produce about thirty thousand eggs each season.

Thousands of barrels of mature herrings are taken every year; the lobster fishery alone employs 40,000 barrels for bait; the cod fishery many times that number. Immense numbers also go to the making of herring oil. Only the very best fish are barreled for sale.

Then, too, on the Pacific coast, the fish are numerous, even more so, some aver, than on the Atlantic shores. In one year alone a Pacific company shipped something like 180,000 gallons of herring oil and 200 barrels of choice herrings. All this represents many thousand barrels of herrings.

The question has been asked, How do these armies of fish get their food? One distinguished naturalist has figured that if one of a countless number of varying minute organisms was allowed perfect development, without any counteracting destruction for one month, the product would be a mass of protoplasm many times larger than the sun. One tiny plant multiplies itself by breaking in two about five times a day, and becomes mature in three hours.

MARKET BOATS IN AT T WHARF

Prices Are Still Sky High and None of the Fares Are Large.

After the extreme quiet of last week, fresh fish receipts looked up more lively this morning at T wharf, there being just 25 fares at the dock when the gong sounded for the opening trade of the week.

The steam trawlers Swell with 64,000 pounds and the Spray with 57,000 pounds were the largest fares of the morning. Several of the offshore sailing fleet were in, the largest being schs. Alice M. Guthrie, 35,000 pounds and Terra Nova, 37,000 pounds.

The shore crafts landed small fares, haddock, cod and hake being in variety. Haddock was quoted from $4 to $5 a hundred pounds, large cod, $6 to $7, market cod, $3 to $4.25; hake, $3.50 to $5 and pollock, $1.50 to $1.85.
