Portland Fish News

The possibility of developing a shrimp canning industry has so attracted officials of the Burnham & Morrill Company, Portland, that they have purchased 4600 pounds of Gulf of Maine shrimps the past week from Capt. Gaspi Contrino of the Boston dragger Sebastiano and Figli, pioneer shrimp fisherman, for laboratory purposes only.

Captain Contrino's success has attracted the attention of other fishermen from Southwest Harbor and New Harbor in Maine to Boston and Gloucester to such an extent that a steady stream of inquires have been coming in to the Fishermen's Relief Corporation's headquarters at 130 Commercial street regarding the design of the net left by Dr. Johann Hjort and Capt. H. Molum, the Norwegian shrimp experts.

Morrill Allen, vice president of the Burnham & Morrill Company, said Friday that if laboratory tests prove successful and fishermen obtain the proper equipment for fishing, there is an excellent chance of developing the industry as a separate branch of the fisheries.
