The arrows on the chart show the direction of travel of each storm as it crossed the coast. The numbers are assigned to storms in chronological order from 1896 through 1954. Certain storms have been omitted from this chart, in part due to the definition of "hurricane" used. The primary criterion for the inclusion in the list was a central pressure of less than 29.00 inches at the time the hurricane reached the United States coast.
