

For Release
April 22, 1938

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Good and bad hurricanes! That hurricanes are all destructive is the universal thought about these most violent of all sea storms. While many of them cause great loss of life and property, it is a matter of observation that many are beneficial. Over one-half that visited Puerto Rico were a real asset and only ten per cent. were wholly destructive. The benefit derived was, of course, from the rain which helped crops and filled the storage reservoirs. Many hurricanes which were destructive in one part of the island were a blessing in another.
