Fishing and temperature! "Is this good fishing weather?" This question has often been asked by the followers of Izaak Walton. Temperature, according to many fishermen, is very important, some favoring high and others favoring low temperatures. Some reason that warm weather is good fishing weather because flies hatch best at that time; others say cool weather is best with wind to drive the fly bait away when the fish are ravenous for the angler's bait. And still another school believes that the determining factor is not warm or cold air, but whether or not the water is warmer than the air.
