

For Release
Jan. 5, 1938

By Maj. A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Blizzards! No verbal description can adequately picture to the mind these storms, the worst in America after the tornado. Wind of 40 miles an hour or more drives the falling snow, or snow already on the ground, with such violence as to cut the faces and blind those brave enough to face the tempest. A barn 20 feet away can not be seen. A farmer before going to his barn will tie a stout cord to his house door so if he misses the barn he can find his way back to shelter; otherwise, he would get lost and probably perish.
