

For Release
April 3, 1939

By Maj. A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Colonization and climate! Nations wishing to expand by colonization should study the climate of the regions they wish to annex for that purpose. It is well-known that the Romans, great conquerors as they were, failed in colonizing Britain and Germany. The Teutons, however, were successful in colonizing Britain, but not the Mediterranean countries. The people of northern Europe are happy and successful in northern United States and Canada. When people migrate they flourish best in that country where the climate is similar to that of the homeland.
